Commonwealth of Massachusetts,

SECRETARY'S DEPARTMENT, BOSTON, March 12, 1872.

To the Honorable Senate and House of Representatives.

In conformity with the General Statutes, I have the honor to submit herewith the Twenty-Ninth Annual Report relating to the BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, AND DEATHS occurring in Massachusetts during the year 1870, and returned from the several cities and towns according to law.

In addition to the usual tables the present document presents features of special interest in the tables of the United States Census of 1870, several of which appear in these pages, and some of them printed for the first time from the manuscript copy forwarded from Washington through the courtesy of Gen. Francis A. Walker, Supt. U. S. Census.

The editorial comments and observations constituting the introductory portion of the present Registration Report have been furnished by Dr. GEORGE DERBY,

Secretary of the State Board of Health, and Professor of Hygiene in Harvard University, and will be found both interesting and instructive, particularly in relation to matters connected with the recent United States Census.

Respectfully submitted.

OLIVER WARNER,

Secretary of the Commonwealth.

TWENTY-NINTH REGISTRATION REPORT.

The accompanying tables exhibit the results of registration in Massachusetts for the year 1870, and represent the records of births, marriages and deaths in all the cities and towns of the State. An examination of their details and a comparison with the results reported in previous years cannot fail to suggest deductions of interest, not only to the statesman and the statistician, but to all who are in any way connected with matters pertaining to State hygiene.

By the first table, which gives a summary statement, it appears that there have been recorded 38,259 births, 14,721 marriages and 27,329 deaths, an aggregate of 80,309, or 3,288 more than during the year 1869.

If a comparison be made in each of these divisions of births, marriages and deaths, with the record of the previous year, it will be seen that

The births have increased by	2,118
The marriages have diminished by . . .	105
The deaths have increased by	1,275

The number of births is greater than has ever before been reported. The deaths are more numerous than in any previous year, except 1863 and 1864. The marriages, although less in number than those reported the year previous (where the number was considerably in excess of former years), are somewhat more than the average number for the past fourteen years.

The natural increase of population, or excess of births over deaths, is 10,930, or 843 more than in 1869.

The daily natural increase is an average of 29.9.

One living child was born to every 38.09 persons; one person in every 49.49 was married, and one person in every 53.33 died.

The daily average of living births was . . .	104.82
The daily average number of marriages was . . .	40.33
The daily average number of deaths was . . .	74.87

The rates of births, marriages and deaths are as follows:—

Births,	26.25 to 1,000 of population.
Marriages,	20.20 “ “
Deaths,	18.07 “ “

Excess of Birth-rate over Death-rate, 8.18 in a thousand, or .818 of one per cent.

This general result must be regarded as satisfactory. It will be seen by the next table that the excess of births over deaths, which was reduced during the war to less than 2,000 (in 1864), has now reached nearly 11,000.

POPULATION.

Since the publication of the Registration Report for 1869, the official census of the State by the United States government has been completed, and although not published in full is available for the purposes of the present work. It is, of course, obvious that these figures will enable us to arrive at conclusions which are more positive and reliable than those of the reports of some previous years which were necessarily founded on the State Census of 1865.

The total population of the State is 1,457,351. The gain or loss in population in five years, and in ten years in the several counties is shown in the following table:—

* Roxbury and Dorchester annexed to Boston.

It will be seen that the large increase of population has taken place in the counties previously populous—in the centres of manufacturing industry, and of commerce. Barnstable, and Dukes and Nantucket have declined in a marked degree; the agricultural county of Franklin but little more than holds its own, and Hampshire shows but a moderate gain. Both Plymouth and Franklin lost population during the five years of war, but are now recovering. On the other hand, Suffolk, Worcester, Middlesex, Hampden and Essex have greatly prospered, and Berkshire, an agricultural county with a good many factories, has also made a marked advance.

Looking at the population of the towns it appears that every town in Barnstable, Dukes and Nantucket Counties, except Provincetown, has lost population, and many of them very largely.

In Berkshire the principal gains have been in Adams, Pittsfield, West Stockbridge, Williamstown and Lenox.

In Bristol County the gain has been almost entirely in Fall River and Taunton, the former city having increased from 17,481 in 1865 to 26,766 in 1870.

In Essex County the most marked increase may be found in Lawrence, Lynn, Gloucester, Haverhill, Salem and Amesbury. Many towns in this county are nearly stationary, and a few have slightly declined.

In Hampden County the purely agricultural towns, like those of Franklin and Hampshire Counties, show a small but pretty steady decline, while the factory towns of Chicopee and Holyoke have increased greatly. Holyoke has nearly doubled its population in the past five years.

In Hampshire the towns of Northampton, Ware, Easthampton and Amherst have notably increased.

In Middlesex County the greatest gains have been in Cambridge, Lowell, Newton, Somerville and Waltham, but many smaller manufacturing towns have prospered, and only eight small farming towns have failed to hold their own.

Norfolk County has gained in the towns occupied largely by persons engaged in business in Boston.

In Plymouth County North Bridgewater is the only town which shows a marked increase.

Suffolk County has absorbed Roxbury and Dorchester, but has also gained in Boston proper, and in Chelsea.

Worcester County shows a small but pretty uniform decline in the population of its farming towns, but an equally steady and frequently large gain in its smaller factory towns, and a large gain in Worcester and Fitchburg.

Age and Sex of the Population of Massachusetts.—The information concerning these two interesting points is taken from manuscript reports received from the Census Bureau at Washington to which have been added such portions of the census of the State during the past forty years as would make the whole subject more intelligible.

In looking at the preceding tables it is plainly seen that Massachusetts is prospering. We have gained more than 15 per cent. in five years. If this rate of growth is continued we shall have, before the year 1900, more than three millions of people in our territory, and Massachusetts will then be a more densely populated country than England now is. Evidently this is far beyond the natural increase of any settled community, and is due to the excess of immigration over emigration, fostered by our manufactures all over the State, and by the commercial activity of the city of Boston. Our farming towns are stationary. They have hardly more inhabitants than fifty years ago, and, of those who remain, the proportion of persons past middle life is probably now much greater than then. The young of both sexes crowd into the busy towns to seek their fortune, or go to more distant fields of labor, where their intelligence and skill may find a better harvest than among the cornfields of the old homestead.

While the farms are thus losing the young people, who go in all directions in and out of the State, there is a steady influx of foreigners to work in our mills and shoe-shops, and indeed, to perform a very great part of the manual labor in every department, not only of manufacturing industry, but of commerce and of agriculture.

Each generation seems to find this tendency of our people more marked. The American, born of Massachusetts stock, and educated in our common schools, if he does not despise the labor of the hands, at any rate finds the use of his mental faculties more profitable. He is unwilling to work on the farm, he is disinclined to the mechanical trades, and he seeks employment (like the Jews, all over the world) in some department of trade, or else in directing the labor of others. The hard work of the hands is chiefly done by strangers: by Irish and Germans and people from the English provinces, brought up under different influences. It is no part of our duty to speculate or moralize about this state of things, but it is important that the fact should be recognized in the interpretation of these tables.

Labor is in demand. Unskilled labor is relatively highly paid, and it attracts to our busy manufacturing towns and villages, and to the domestic service of our families, a host of laborers from other countries.

There are thus two active streams of movement among the people, the one leading from our rural townships to every field of commerce and industry in this and other States where money can be made by superior intelligence; the other, a still stronger current, bringing from foreign parts the busy hands which make our State a hive of industry.

Both are made up of the productive classes, and both leave a large proportion of the unproductive classes behind them. We may thus see a reason for the changes which have taken place in the distribution of ages among the people during the past forty years. We were a comparatively stationary population in 1830. We are now migratory, but the influx far exceeds the efflux, and is working great changes in the character of our people.

We would call attention in the forty years' table above referred to, to the evidence which it affords of the influence of the civil war upon the birth of children. In the column representing the ages 5 to 10 in the years 1865 and 1870, the proportion suddenly drops from 11.32 to 9.60. While from 10 to 15 it remains about the same. The smaller proportion of children under 5 in both these years is probably also due to the loss of so many adult men between 1861 and 1865.

NEW TOWNS, CHANGES OF NAMES, &c.

The last notice in these reports of the incorporation or change of names of cities or towns in the Commonwealth, was in the report of 1867. The following additional changes have since occurred:—

1867. Roxbury was annexed to Boston in 1867.

1868. The town of HYDE PARK was incorporated April 22, 1868, from portions of Dorchester, Milton and Dedham. In the same year the name of South Danvers was by legislative enactment changed to Peabody, and that of South Reading to Wakefield.

1869. Dorchester was annexed to Boston in 1869.

1870. The town of NORFOLK was incorporated February 23, 1870, from portions of Wrentham, Franklin, Medway and Walpole. The town of EVERETT was incorporated March 9, 1870, from Malden. The town of GAY HEAD was incorporated April 30, 1870, embracing the former district of Gay Head. The town of MASHPEE was incorporated May 18, 1870, embracing the former district of Marshpee.

1871. The town of AYER was incorporated February 14, 1871, from portions of Groton and Shirley. The town of MAYNARD was incorporated April 19, 1871, embracing portions of Stow and Sudbury. The name of North Chelsea was changed to Revere, March 24, 1871.

The Birth-rate for 1870 is 2·62 for every one hundred persons, or 26 2 for every one thousand. Including the stillborn, a child was born to every 37 persons.

The whole number of births (stillborn included), is 39,278, or 2,043 more than in 1869. It is probable that this number is considerably less than the actual number of births in the State, the registration of births according to the existing regulations being exposed to obvious deficiencies.

The very marked diminution in the Birth-rate which occurred in 1862, and which, in consequence of the absence of male adults in the national service and the death of great numbers, continued during the four years of war (1862–5) has not yet been recovered from, although there is a steady but very gradual approach to the relatively high rates which were maintained before 1861.

The disparity between the two semi-annual periods as regards the number of births, is somewhat less in 1870 than has been apparent in previous years. The same causes which were alluded to in former reports, the enforced separation of husbands from their wives at certain seasons of the year in order that the occupations of seamen, of fishermen, of laborers, &c., may be pursued, are still operative.

The preponderance of male births in a certain fixed proportion, varying but little from year to year, and in groups of years practically constant, is a fact to be recognized and not to be explained. The seemingly fortuitous occurrence of a male or female birth is seen to be strictly in accordance with nature's great plan.

But if the immediate causes of this disparity are concealed from human eyes, the uses are plain. The excess of males provides for the casualties of war and exposure. Should women take their share of these risks the male sex would preponderate, and nature's plan would be reversed. We may be therefore quite sure that they never will.

The above table shows that the proportion of Foreign births has remained quite constant since 1864; the purely American births have steadily diminished their ratio; and the births from mixed parentage have as steadily advanced.

The following table presents a more extended comparison in point of time:—

Percentages of American and Foreign LIVING BIRTHS in the past Twenty-Two Years.

	Average. 1849-53.	Average. 1854-58.	Average. 1859-63.	Average. 1864-68.	Average. 1869-70.

One parent Foreign,	1·02	5·50	7·05	8·42	10·29

The excess of foreign over native parentage is considerably greater than in any year since 1865; it is 2,776, or 647 more than the excess reported the previous year, and 1,038 more than the average for the previous four years. Foreign births are in the majority in Suffolk, Middlesex, Worcester, Hampden, Norfolk, Bristol and Berkshire.

Comparing 1870 with 1869, we find that the American births have diminished by 463; the Foreign births have increased by 1,110; and the mixed (one parent foreign) have increased by 485.

This evidence is confirmatory of our general remarks concerning the census of 1870. The character of our population is undergoing a great change. Surely, and not very slowly, a mixed stock of Irish, Germans and Canadians is taking the place of the purely English stock which has possessed Massachusetts for more than two centuries. The tide of immigration flows the stronger with our increasing wealth and general prosperity. There is much hard work to be done, unskilled labor is in demand, and Americans are not ready or willing to supply it from their own ranks. Here are facts for the statesman, the educator and the moralist.

Plural Births.—Three hundred and forty-seven women in Massachusetts gave birth in 1870 to 697 children. Three hundred and forty-four had twins and three had triplets. The proportion of women in labor who give birth to more than one child is each year nearly the same,—one in every hundred. The number of cases of triplets is three less than in the previous year.

Illegitimates.—The number reported is 285, one less than in 1869. There are 131 males and 154 females. As has been a general rule, the latter (females) predominate, although for what reason we are at a loss to imagine.

Stillborn.—The number reported was 1,019, 75 less than in 1869.

MARRIAGES.

The whole number of marriages reported for 1870 was 14,721, a decrease of 105 as compared with 1869.

The two preceding tables show a portion of the marriages which occurred at ages when such contracts are seldom made, or where the disparity in this respect between the parties was remarkable. Aside from the merely transient interest which they may afford those who review them from curiosity, they have a certain scientific value. It will be seen that 352 females were married at 17, 181 at 16, 33 at 15 and 6 at 14 years of age. Some of the most remarkable marriages of the year were as follows: among the first marriages of both parties, was that of a man of 75 to a woman of 28, another of a man of 67 to a woman of 30, and two others where the parties were each 60 years of age. The* youngest couple were a boy of 17 and a girl of 16. A youth of 19 married a spinster of 28, and another married a widow of 30. A youth of 18 married a widow of the same age, and another married a widow of 35. A woman aged 25 married for the fourth time. A man aged fourscore years and six, found his "affinity" for the second time, in the person of a maiden of 37.

There were marriages of men at the ages of 81, 79, 76, 75 and 74.

A man aged 59, married for his third wife, a woman who had been three times married before.

A man aged 45 married a woman aged 26, both parties having been twice married before. Twenty-nine men married for the fourth time; the eldest at 83, married a widow of 43; the youngest at 36, married a maiden of 18.

A woman was married at the age of 78 to a man of 81. There occurred also the fifth marriage of a man of 54 to a widow of 42, and the fourth in each case of a man of 57 to a woman of the same age.

D E A T H S .

The whole number of deaths reported throughout the State during the year 1870, was 27,329. This number is greater than that recorded in 1869, by 1,275; and it is 2,336 more than the average annual number for the previous ten years (1860-69), including the years of the civil war, when a largely increased mortality was reported.

The death-rate for the State for the past six years is given in the following table :—

The order of mortality is as follows, beginning with the lowest : Barnstable, Berkshire, Norfolk, Plymouth, Franklin, Hampshire, Essex, Worcester, Bristol, Dukes, Middlesex, Hampden, Nantucket and Suffolk.

The preceding tables show the very marked difference in the death-rate between country and city. Yet it would be erroneous to suppose that this is all due to salubrious surroundings in the one case, and overcrowding in the other. These are very important influences and must have weight in any comparison, but they should not be considered alone. The two populations are not of equal age. There are more children in the cities than in the country in proportion to the whole number of inhabitants.

The birth-rate is high in Suffolk and the death-rate corresponds. In Barnstable and Berkshire and Franklin, both are low. More children are born to the poor, and a greater number die from neglect and exposure in the first years of life. Mere fecundity is not proof of prosperity either in the family or the nation. The proportion of children who are brought through the perils of infancy, and who reach maturity, is a better evidence of the existence of normal and healthful conditions. But this is hard to determine in Massachusetts, owing to the migratory and unsettled habits of our people.

In the tables which have led to these remarks, Dukes and Nantucket Counties have so small a population altogether, that their percentages for a single year prove nothing.

The above table gives the death-rate in our largest cities and towns, for 1870, in their order, and also a comparison with 1865. Such statements are obviously of far greater value in these two years of the census than at any other time. Some of the towns, like Holyoke, have nearly doubled their population in the interval.

An improvement in the rate for 1870 is not to be fairly credited to the cities and towns in which it occurred, without also remembering that 1865 was a year of war, and that the rate for the whole State was then 2.06 per. cent. instead of 1.87 per cent. in 1870.

Comparing the results shown in the foregoing table with those recorded in 1869, we find that the deaths of those whose parents were both American have increased by 84; of those whose parentage was Foreign the number has increased by 967; while the deaths of those whose parentage was mixed, one parent being American and the other Foreign, have increased by 63. Of the class "not stated," 434 are reported in 1870, being 161 more than in 1869.

The next table makes a comparison of four years, presenting a striking contrast in the mortality at various ages between the native and the foreign elements of our population. In calculating the percentages, those of half-foreign parentage are divided equally.

From this comparison, carried through a series of years, two facts are evident, namely, that the mortality among children is much greater in those of Foreign parentage ; and that the greater part of our population past middle life still continues to be of native stock.

Diphtheria.—Since 1864, this disease appears to have been steadily diminishing in its fatality, and the number of deaths the present year is less than in any of the previous ten years. The alarming increase of mortality reported during the five years, 1860–64, has not been approached at any season since, and diphtheria is no longer included, as at that time, among the most fatal diseases. This immunity is to be accounted for partly by greater correctness in diagnosis of the disease at the present time, but chiefly by the absolute remission of epidemics of diphtheria, an affection which is avowedly very fatal.

Dysentery also appears to have been subject to a gradual decrease in its fatality, the number of deaths having diminished from 1,186 in 1864 to 471 in 1870. The low rates of ten years ago are again reached, and if we may draw any inferences from the experiences of previous years, in the periodic rise and fall of mortality from dysentery, approaching something like regularity, we may, with tolerable certainty, predict an increased death-rate from this cause before many summers shall have passed. The relative distribution of the mortality in the various counties is evidence of the sporadic nature of the disease, during 1870. As usual, the mortality is greatest during August and September (182 of the 471 deaths having occurred in these months); and more than one-half the deaths (273) were of children under five years of age.

Typhus.—The number of deaths was greater by 128 than that reported for 1869. The fatality was greatest in the ages between twenty and thirty, and was nearly equally divided between the two sexes. The whole number of deaths reported (including 134 under five years of age, classed as usual, with doubtful propriety, as infantile fever), was 1,333. The autumnal months, and especially September and October, exhibit the greatest mortality.

Measles.—Two hundred and sixty-nine deaths were reported in 1870; of these, two hundred and eighteen were children under 5 years of age. The mortality was distributed through all the counties except Dukes, Nantucket and Plymouth. The first six months of the year show a considerably larger proportion of deaths than the last six months.

Scarlatina.—There were 683 deaths, a diminution of more than one-half as compared with the report of 1869. Of the deaths recorded, 460 were under the age of five years, and 612 were under ten years of age. The mortality was distributed quite equally through all the months of the year. None of the counties were exempt, but (as compared with deaths from other causes) the disease was especially fatal in Suffolk, Worcester, Middlesex, Hampshire, Hampden and Bristol.

Cholera Infantum caused the death of 1,914 young children in 1870, 490 more than were reported in 1869. The deaths from this cause comprised 7·1 per cent. of the whole number of deaths, and this ratio is showing an alarming increase from year to year. The average percentage for the past twenty-nine years, as compared with the deaths from all causes, is 3·70, and for the past five years (1865–69) it is 4·95. In the order of relative mortality, cholera infantum takes its place as the second in the list, standing next to consumption, a position it has never before occupied. This striking promotion of a disease so deadly in its inroads on infant life, should need no other argument to enforce the lessons which it so plainly teaches, namely, that more emphatic attention should be paid to the well-known and preventable causes and that the need for the purification of crowded centres of population is more imperative than ever.

The percentage of deaths from cholera infantum to deaths from all specified causes in the various counties was as follows: Barnstable, 2·9; Berkshire, 4·4; Bristol, 4·7; Dukes and Nantucket, 0·8; Essex, 6·6; Franklin, 4·4; Hampden, 6·5; Hampshire, 6·7; Middlesex, 9·1; Norfolk, 5·9; Plymouth, 3·9; Suffolk, 7·8; Worcester, 8.

Consumption.—There were 5,003 deaths in 1870, with an excess of 449 females. The following tabular statement shows that the changes of the seasons exercise but little influence on the fatality of New England's scourge:—

First Quarter, . . . 1,187	Third Quarter, . . . 1,349
Second Quarter, . . . 1,232	Fourth Quarter, . . . 1,235

If comparison is made according to the divisions of the seasons strictly, the numbers are as follows :—

The slight increase in the actual and the relative mortality from consumption reported in 1870, does not seriously affect the positive tendency toward amelioration as regards the fatality of this disease, a fact made evident in the following table :—

Pneumonia proved fatal in 1870 to 1,718, a number 18 less than that reported the previous year. The sexes were almost equally divided.

The largest mortality occurred in March, and the least was in September. The first three months of the year contributed very nearly 38 per cent of the whole mortality.

Six hundred and eighty-six of the deaths (39 per cent. of the whole number) were of children, and four hundred and forty-two (twenty-six per cent. of the whole) occurred in persons above 60 years old; thus, considerably more than half the mortality occurred at the extremes of life.

N O T E .

Previously to the adoption, in the Registration Report of 1855, of the present NOSOLOGICAL ARRANGEMENT of Tables IX. and X., the term "Infantile" in those Tables included, under a single designation, not only all deaths returned under the several heads "Infantile," "Premature," or "Premature Births," but also all ascribed to "Debility" or "Unknown" causes, if under two years of age.

This plan was continued until the Registration Report of 1868, in which, to secure greater accuracy, the method now employed was adopted, by which Deaths returned under the head of "Premature," "Premature Births," or "Infantile," are stated separately in Table VIII. and combined in Tables IX. and X. Deaths of children under two years, from "Debility" or "Unknown" cause, are no longer classed as "Infantile."

See Registration Report of 1868, p. cv., for a fuller explanation.

STATISTICAL NOSOLOGY

ADOPTED FOR REGISTRATION IN MASSACHUSETTS.

The following plan of a Nomenclature and Classification of Diseases does not essentially differ from that authorized by the Registrar-General of England, to be used in the preparation of the "Weekly Return of Births and Deaths in London," and is also, with slight modifications, identical with that embodied in a report drawn up by William Farr, Esq., M. D., of London, for the consideration of the International Statistical Congress which met at Paris in September, 1855; which report was printed in the Appendix to the Sixteenth Registration Report of the Registrar-General, England.

[NOTE.—This page and those that follow contain two lists of causes of death. The first,—that on the left side,—may be called the TABULAR LIST, and comprises all the heads which it is proposed to admit into the complete tables (IX. and X.) and under which ALL deaths, from whatever cause are finally distributed. It represents those diseases which, under the same terms, or terms strictly synonymous with them, are found in practice to occur most frequently.

The SUPPLEMENTAL LIST is subordinate to the first, and contains the principal special diseases which it may be considered desirable to note. The figures in this list indicate the corresponding heads of the tabular list under which such diseases are ultimately arranged.

Table VIII. includes both the Tabular and Supplementary lists; Tables IX. and X. the Tabular list only.]
